Pilot in Crash Had Used Cocaine

United Press International WASHINGTON --- The pilot of a commuter airliner that crashed in Colorado on Jan. 19, killing nine persons, tested positive for cocaine in what may be the first such drugrelated disaster in U.S. commercial aviation, officials said Friday.

The National Transportation Safety Board released a toxicological report saying that tests of the pilot. Steven Silver, showed his blood and urine contained traces of cocaine.

U.K. Pound Note Is Credited to History

By Warren Getler International Henald Tribune

LONDON - While the British pound has been soaring on foreign exchange markets, one of its domestic genre was down and out by week's end. On Friday, the Bank of England removed the one-pound note as legal tender, putting an end to a bill that has been in and out of favor here since its introduction in 1797.

"It's been treated as small change, treated rather badly." over the years, said a Bank of England spokesman. A pound is worth $1.85.

After midnight Friday, holders of one-pound notes could exchange them at the Bank of England for one-pound coins. Shops and commercial banks are no longer ohliged to accept the one-pound Newton, as the bill is called by Bank of England authorities.

Sir Isaac Newton, the English mathematician and physicist, has his portrait on the note's flip side, with an etching of Queen Elizabeth II emblazoned on the front. Ironically, one of the posts held by Newton was master of the Royal Mint, the establishment that produces Britain's money.

The one-pound note had been on the endangered species list since 1984 when the Bank of England stopped printing the bills. Between 1978 and 1984, the bank issued 5.5 billion one-pound Newtons. Only 70 million remain in circulation.

The Bank of England spokesman said that the diminished purchasing power of the note, in rela-tion to the cost of maintaining stocks and repro-ducing the hill, led to the decision to end its legaltender status.

John Keyworth, curator of the Bank of England Museum, said Friday, "The one-note bills were looking very dirty very soon, and had to be taken out of circulation." He said they had a short life span, and that "made them expensive for the bank,

A Chance for Britain

Budget day, the nearest thing Britain the malady seemed to be mastered. But has to a national holiday, falls on the ides wage inflation in Britain is sadly dynamof March. The new budget will be less dramatic than Caesar's murder, but it could determine whether Margaret Thatcher is simply interrupting a longterm economic decline or reversing it.

Tuesday could be an anticlimax. Until relax taxes - or boost spending - considerably. Tax revenue proved far more buoyant than expected in 1987 because the economy was more buoyant. The publie deficit, against which Mrs. Thatcher has fought for nine years, has swung remarkably out of the red. Even if revenues have been bolstered by the proceeds of privatization (these can't continue forever, but there are more to come), the favorable difference between forecasts and reality this past year is large: the equivalent of several percentage points of GNP. Doesn't that merit a big relaxation?

Unfortunately, no. Budget policy cannot be guided just by the difference between public receipts and spending. What matters is the balance between total spending, right across the economy, and saving. looking at the private sector as well as the public. Here the picture is much less cheering. The private sector is running into debt far faster than the government is getting out of it.

The balance of payments for goods and services is drifting back into sizable deficit even before the country's oil heritage runs out. And the British disease - wages rising faster than productivity and far faster than wages abroad - threatens to become rampant again. For several years, phitheater discovered under the City to due partly to rising unemployment and to laws that clipped the wings of the unions,

This would burt Britain, the European Community, NATO and the Third World, where Britain remains an important actor. At best, a mild relaxation of budgetary restraint is in order. More would be possible if other countries, including West Germany, were prepared to move clearly toward expansion, but that is not in the cards and Britain cannot afford to get out of line.

What it needs now and for several years to come is a budget to spur structural change; a budget largely though not wholly neutral in demand terms but aimed at raising economic efficiency in the longer term. Britain's share of world trade has to grow, and its propensity to import has to fall. This can happen only through action - the effects will be slow - to raise spending on research and de-velopment, train workers and raise capital expenditure in industry. Government can't do this alone, but its budgets can set the stage for a Japanese-type renaissance. Britain needs more than the Roman ampay its way into the next century.

Interlocked Partners

Nicaragua has gone further in complying with the Arias peace plan than Guatemala, Honduras and El Salvador, However tardily and grudgingly, the Sandinists are negotiat-ing with their sworn enemies, the contras, There is more diversity of published and spoken opinion in Managua than in those other three ostensibly democratic countries. Sure, the Sandinists don't like democracy one bit and have harassed and jailed political opponents, But opposition figures are not murdered with impunity, as they are in El Salvador, Guatemala and Honduras, Nicaraguan leaders have a point when they argue that they are being singled out for failure to comply completely with the peace plan promoted by President Oscar Arias of Costa Rica. There is a reason, if not an excuse, for the double standard. Unlike other regimes in Central America, Nicaragua's is tied militarily to the Soviet bloc, and some of its leaders doubtless yearn to implant a Communist tyranny similar to Fidel Castro's in Cuba. To its neighbors and the United States, Nicaragua is a military and ideological challenge.

Scrutinizing Nicaragua's compliance with the plan is inextricably tied to U.S. funding of the contras. The Reagan administration pounces on everything Managua does that lends any credence to the thesis requirement to end military aid to the contras, Remarkably, this is happening despite the Reagan team's efforts to sabotage any settlement that fails to depose the Sandinists, At the same time, neither Mr. Arias nor supporters of his peace plan have paid much attention to whether the other Central American states have been living up to their obligations under the plan. Nicaragua's neighbors are asked, for example, to give "urgent attention" to resettlement of refugees.

According to a careful, detailed account by Arych Neier of Americas Watch, a human rights monitoring group, Honduras has made no effort whatever to resettle thousands of peasants displaced to make room for contra military bases near the Nicaraguan frontier. In El Salvador and Guatema-Ia, where insurgencies fester, the armed forces have blocked all attempts to resettle peasants removed from combat areas. The Arias plan calls for reconciliation and amnesty for political prisoners. In El Salva-dor, this laudable purpose was sullied by a weak elected regime: It extended amnesties to death squad killers as a sop to the military. Guatemala's civilian regime timidly followed suit, renouncing the right to punish the army for massacres of peasants. Since rebels in both countries show no inclination to abanir struggle, there is no end in

The Anschluss Remembered in Three Dimensions

N EW YORK -- Fifty years ago, the An-schluss made Austria part of the Third Reich, Within hours, it transformed me along with all Jews in its reach. The event has three dimensions in my mind, each distinct.

Anschluss A is the memory of a cataclysm filtering through 13-year-old Fritz Mandelbaum, which was my name then. I remember the art deco pattern of our radio and how its straight lines suddenly wavered to the high-pitched voice of the Austrian chancellor, Kurt von Schuschnigg: "We are yielding to brute force."

I remember the silence sweeping down on us afterward. It blew away all previous reality, in-cluding the cozy smell of Friday night carp. I remember the taumess of my skin that night: I felt stretched and extended from the darkness around. my bed to the darkness of the streets, vulnerable to kicks from each passing boot. I remember the hush of dawn; my parents, stunned, skeepless like my-self, whispering into the telephone, tiptoeing around the room where the maid slept her sovereign sleep as the sudden "Aryan" in the house.

It is beyond my power to undo the monstrosity. But I can refuse to let it push me into repeating it in reverse.

I remember the untouched cups of coffee on the table. We couldn't swallow because of the monumental vibrations from overhead. Hundreds of planes overwhelmed the sky, spangling the breeze with leaflets. I remember the window that was no longer a window: It was the peep hole of a furtive outcast. I crouched behind it to watch the city bloom poi-sonously against me: the shouts of "Heil Hitlert" here and there punctuating traffic noise until they merged and swelled and outboomed the trucks.

I remember the swastikas leaping from arm-bands to posters, from posters to flags; the drums and trumpets on the radio setting the beat for marchers' footfalls across the cobbles. Vienna had become a brightness of colors and sounds and street-corner jubilation. And I remember my disBy Frederic Morton belief that this festival all around us must mean our doom. Anschluss A was a martial gala so cunningly orchestrated that I feit, worse than shame, fear. I remember knowing that if I didn't have to tremble, I would want to march. Anschluss B is very different. Contemplated today by Frederic Morton, American writer, it is the product of surprisingly complex factors: Pro-German sentiment along the Danube not only preceded the Nazis but involved many of their later opponents. As the antique charm of the Habsburg realm went sour, as the multinational Plasourg ream went sour, as the multimanonal operetta became dissonance, it was not just the pan-German nationalists in Austria-Hungary who looked to Berlin; liberals and leftists also felt that redemption must come from the progressive Kul-tur of the Reich. lapsed; the Austrian parliament named the rem-nant state German Austria and declared it to be "a component part of the German Republic." At the peace conference of Saint-Germann, Otto Bauer, foreign minister of the new rump nation, demanded its union with Germany. Although the allies refused, Mr. Bauer's eloquent insistence — the advocacy of a Jewish socialist — gave the very term Anschluss international currency. The first republic was born not of the will of The first republic was born not of the will of Austrians but by edict of the victorious allies, Between the wars, "Anschuss" had more vitality than "Osterreich" (Austria) in the hearts of its people. In every other home, "Osterreich" meant hunger. Except for a spasm of semi-prosperity in the mid-"20s, depression lasted as long as indepen-dence, from 1918 to 1938. If there was not enough bread, there was even less identity. The state that did not want to be a state subsisted as a scenic little shm whose only viable traditions were imperial. Into the void goose-stepped the new suzerain of the new empire. It is no accident that Hitler's first speech in Vienna thundered from the balcony of the Imperial Palace or that the brother of Arthur Seyss-Inquart, Austria's chief Nazi, had once tu-tored the children of the last Habsburg, Karl L Politically, the monarchists were as hostile to

Some scientists minimize the dense Some scientists minimize the dange of ALDS spreading among America heterosexuals in large numbers out of genuine conviction that there is a valid statistical base for fear.

But some Americans cannot accur the idea of heterosexually transmitted AIDS because it destroys their being that AIDS is a punishment to bom sexuals and addicts. Since they know that heterosexual transmission take place in Africa, I guess they figure for God just hates Africans.

The debate in the newspapers and on television was started by an impo-tant book which says that widespiced heterosexual transmission is already occurring in the United States. It is pity that the book has flaws.

"Crisis: Heterosexual Behavior is the Age of AIDS" (Grove Press) car ries the names of the famous sense theraoists Dr. William H. Master and Virginia E. Johnson. That make it big news. The third author, D. Robert C. Kolodny, their colleager was most responsible for carrying of the study and writing the book. The study involved 400 heterose uals with many sexual partners and control group of 400 one-partner he crosexuals. The conclusions are fue AIDS is "now running rampant" among beterosexuals and that the death toll will be "the most formidable the world has ever seen."

The fury of American AIDS specialists descended even before some of them read the book. But there are good reasons for some of the anger. The most serious flaw is that in authors failed to submit their for study to outside scrutiny before pa-lishing the book. Their excuses in painfully lame: not enough time, not enough money and anyway it was just meant to be a pilot project.

Time and money are problem that scientists must meet before the publish, not after. And in the book the study is presented not just as a mere "pilot" beginning but as just fication for serious warnings.

The authors also aroused attack by mentioning the possibility of trans-mission through deep kissing and that the Sandinists are incorrigible totalitarians. Congress remains narrowly divided on aid to the contras. If the administration can make it appear that the Sandinists are to blame for a collapse of the Arias plan, it would be easier to restore contra aid.

The sustained and intense pressure on Nicaragua has resulted in bringing belligerents to peace talks and opening up a closed system. Whatever the Arias plan achieves elsewhere, it may well give some legitimacy to a democratic internal opposition in Managua, if the United States honors the plan's the region's other civil wars. These failings have not been fatal to the plan, not yet. So widespread is the yearning for peace that no one wants to be denounced as the killer of this dream. President Reagan says he is for the peace plan, as does Mikhail Gorbachev. This gives some leverage to Mr. Arias as he tries to shame antagonists into compliance. But the Central American conflicts are in many ways interlocked. The real gains in Nicaragua will not be consolidated without progress throughout the region.

An Opportunity for Austria

Fifty years ago, Nazi columns with Hitler at their head marched into neighboring Austria to unite the German peoples for one brief tragic period in their history. This was never going to be a happy birthday. But the way in which attenuion has been refocused on Austria and its president during the last 12 months has made it a particularly embarrassing moment for Vienna.

Whereas the West Germans have clearly done penance for their Nazi past, the Austrians, it is said, do not even comprehend that they have anything to regret. They have pre-tended that their Nazi phase did not happen. and not only elected Dr. Waldheim in the face of searching questions about his past. but in many cases have defended their choice of president ever since. There is a common perception that their country may have escaped too lightly at the end of the war.

Austrians to some extent have a right to feel hard done by. This reading of history, for instance, fails to acknowledge the character of the time. Nobody can understand that period who does not also recognize the extent to which thinking was dominated by the fear of Leniniss Bolshevism and the international revolution. Now even the Russians are being brought to acknowledge the extent of Stalin's terror. This poignant anniversary is an appropriate time for Austria to renounce its Nazi past - and those who played prominent parts in it.

Freud's judgment would probably be more merciful than ours. He knew that civilized behavior is a very fragile thing. He knew that a capacity for heroic confrontation with one's discreditable secrets is granted only to heroie spirits. Had Mr. Waldheim been such a

By what standard, exactly, is Mr. Waldheim to be condemned for knowledge of a policy he did not make and had no power to thwart? In his book "The Terrible Secret." Walter Laqueur has established conclusively that the deadly nature of Hitler's program for the extermination of European Jews was known, in Europe and in America, by 1942. Those who wished to know could know. Great figures like Roosevelt and lief, evasion and inaction. Mr. Waldheim is, in a sense, a guilty man. But historic guilt has to be proportioned to the degree of one's personal options and one's ability to act. By that standard, to read Mr. Waldheim wholly out of civilized society while excusing others who had far greater powers to act seems a bit one-sided. Lieutenant Waldheim of Group E of the Wehrmacht seems guilty, in the main, of being a petty player in a drama whose immeasurable evil be lacked the imagination to measure or the courage to resist. His "forgetfulness" is more human than heroic. But, as Freud knew, being more human than heroic is a constant and universal liability for us

But the sudden reaching for pejoratives displayed something, too, about the way many are responding to that anguish, and about the raw emotions that sour but also undermine the latest talk of a U.S.-brokered peace.

The Palestinian revolt in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip is now in its fourth month. and what courtesies might once have existed been stripped away.

Moreover, said a commentary in the Jerusalem Post the other day, the uprising "is gradual-ly becoming a war of populations, instead of a limited conflict between youths from both com- prejudice. munitics."

The argument was that since the revolt began on Dec. 9, the fighting had broadened. Jewish settlers have been drawn in, and Palestinian women of various ages, too. And the confrontation is not limited to the streets.

On March 3, someone slaughtered 2,000 chickens belonging to a Jewisb border settlement. Olive trees owned by Palestinians have been uprooted. The situation, the Jerusalem Post said. "is rapidly deterioratiog to its pre-1948 origins: mutual vandalization of property, destruction of trees and of livestock, stoning and stabbing."

Yet as a general strike by Palestinians in the occupied territories was meant to show Wednesday, two decades of Israeli occupation of the West Bank and Gaza Strip have created a dependence on Palestinian labor in Israel itself. The conflict, the newspaper said, is one "be-between Israeli and Palestinian have largely tween communities whose mutual dependence compels them to maintain a minimum of contact necessary to meet their basic needs." When that contact is across battle lines, the insults seem to draw on decades of hurt and anger and

> A Palestinian demonstrator, who declined to be identified, said he had been detained and had asked where he might pray. His captors, he said, offered him a scatological response. The examples multiply. Some Israeli soldiers have told Israeli reporters that demonstrators shout at them, "Where's Hitler?"

The conflict, many argue, has embittered not only the already raw relationship between Israclis and Palestinians, but also the relationship between Israel's Jews and its Arab minority.

Israeli Jews lack a conviction that better relations are possible with Arabs." Rabbi Bruce Cohen, leader of Interns for Peace, a movement promoting Jewish-Arab coexistence, said at a meeting of American Reform rabbis in Jerusalem on Thursday. "And today they feel even more reinforced in that view.

We do not want them here," it said.

Among the 40 Jewish settler families lodged in enclaves among the 70,000 Palestinians of Hebron, the sense of apocalypse deepens. Thus, Wednesday night, when Palestinians protested and settlers opened fire on them, wounding three Palestinians, Rabhi Moshe Levinger, a leader of the settlers, told the Israeli radio, "In my view, if we did not stop them, they would have arrived at the synagogue and committed a massacre against the Jews."

In response to gunfire from the settlers, and attacks oo Palestinian cars, residents of Hebron said, thousands of Palestinians took to the rooftops, chanting, "God is Great!" The scene evoked the harsh collision of religions in a city that is custodian of shrices sacred to Moslem and Jew alike.

Such language, recalling the 1929 massacre of 69 Jews by Arabs in Hebron, might inflame others, but not, apparently, the army. "The demonstrations were inteoded against the army and at no point was there an attempt or any intention to attack Jewish homes" in Hebron. a commander there said.

At least 85 Palestinians have been killed in the three months of uprising. But even the days of relative calm, like Thursday, should not be mistaken for quiet in a swirling, sporadic war that might flare in one place even as it is quelled in another, then turn in upon itself. Arafat Says He Is Ready For Peace With Israel

By Youssef Ibrahim

New York Times Service TUNIS - Yasser Arafat, the Palestine Liberation Organization chairman, said Friday that he was ready to make peace with Israel and live next to the Jewish state with international guarantees that safeguard the security of both Israelis and Palestinians.

"Peace needs courageous men." Mr. Arafat said in an interview. "We have it. We are waiting for the other side to have it. Are they ready? Or are they following this stupid Israeli military junta?"

This view, he said, expresses a wide Palestinian consensus. "In our Palestinian National Council we say land for peace," he said. asserting that the commitment embodies a Palestinian desire for "peace for both of us."

But the PLO leader said he saw no hope for the peace effort under-taken by the U.S. secretary of state. George P. Shultz, asserting that it ignored the Palestinians and failed to address their basic concerns.

"Mr. Shultz said he is coming to solve the Palestinian problem." Mr. Arafat said. "He contacted everybody except the Palestinians, Ev-erybodv!' He complained that the United States wanted the Arabs to speak for Palestinians as though they were not adults, adding sarcastical-ly, "If there were a Canadian problem, would they go to Queen Elizabeth to solve it?

Mr. Arafat said that Mr. Shultz's failure to engage the Palestinians in a dialogue is "a tragedy." adding: "He will not achieve any results."

At another point he said. "If this opportunity is lost, there is no other opportunity" for peace between Israclis and Palestinians.

He said the time has passed for United Nations on Friday that it Palestinians to be represented in any talks by a joint Palestinian-Jordanian delegation or any joint of Israel as an independent state. Mr. Arafat said: "I am not Sha-mir." Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir of Israel. He added. "I am going to deal with my enemies." He denied that the recent attack by PLO guerrillas on an Israeli bus in the Negev desert, which left three Israelis and three Palestinians dead, contradicted his peaceful disposition. He said the PLO was still committed to its 1985 Cairo Declaration to suspend all military operations against Israel outside the occupied territories of the West Bank and Gaza.

"But you cannot expect a resistance movement to drop its arms just like that," Mr. Arafat said. We have the right to use all methods,' against what he described as Israeli military targets. He argued that the bus was carrying workers to the Dimona nuclear facility, which he described as the "most dangerous military target in the Middle East."

Mr. Arafat also made the follow ing points:

• The uprising of Palestinians against Israeli occupation is under orders from the PLO not to use any weapons against Israeli soldiers. • The Palestinians in the occupied territories are largely dependent on self-help and financial as-sistance from Palestinians outside, whose "money has taken the place of the weaker response from most of the Arah governmeots."

• The United States is still pushing for a Jordanian-Israeli "condominium" to rule over the Israelioccupied West Bank and Gaza instead of an independent Palestinian state there.

of Mr. Wolfe, significant unease. Mr. Ferrer called Mr. Wolfe a good writer who used the malign cliches that journalism has perpetuated about the Bronx for his own fictional and satirical purposes. But Mr. Ferrer had doubts about the depth of the reportage performed by Mr. Wolfe, a natty dresser who, Mr. Ferrer believes, thinks that character is cloth deep.

Paul T. Gentile, Bronx district attorney, shares Mr. Ferrer's distress. "The book is very entertaining, but it's a work of fiction," he said. "You'd never get the sense anyone in the system is dedicated to anything other than feeding their egos. I've got 300 lawyers, and they are very caring people."

He said that Mr. Welfe, "whom I admire and respect." had exercised poetic license with sometimes unfortunate effects. For example, he said, "This place is not called the fortress."

For the lawyer William M. Kunstler, however, Mr. Wolfe has captured the essence of criminal justice in the Bronx. "No doubt this is a fortress," said Mr. Kunstler, 70, over a Lord Jersey's adage: "Contrary to what the Methodists tell tongue sandwich in the Court Deli, hallway between the ourthouse and Yankee Stadium, "This is an outpost of the power in what is regarded as very hostile country. They can't afford to let this pass into minority hands."

He is not especially well disposed to Mr. Wolfe, Mr. Kunstler said; not because of his portrayal in the novel as Al Vogel, a manipulative liberal lawyer, hut because Mr. Wolfe's 1970 book "Radical Chic" destroyed white support for the Black Panthers, whom Mr. Kunstler was defending. "He's a snide, cynical writer, but a very effective one," Mr. Kunstler said. "From this book, my mother-in-law thinks Wolfe is a total racist. But I thought he was reflecting white society's coocepts and fears, which they keep in check here by the criminal law. It's the fear of the black male, and it creates terrible tensions, which all accumulate up here on the

Mr. Kunstler's mother-in-law expresses another common concern about the novel: that its concentration on racial and ethnie antagonism is extreme, unbalanced and invidious.

The Reverend Wendell Foster, a Bronx Democrat who is a city councilman, said the novel had angered many. "Some feel that it's false, that it's sensationalized and could do more to antagonize folk than to bring people together," he said. "But race relations in New York City are the worst in the country now, and you hear people all over the country talking about it. That's unfortunate."

Mr. Wolfe, 58, is alternately bemused by and defensive about such concerns.

His success radiates from his eyes and his smile with a charm that, as be once said of Leonard Bernstein, illustrates us, money and success are good for the soul."

This could be considered the basic message of the ambitious and expensive (8 billion lire or $6.5 million) exhibition at 5 63.6 Palazzo Grassi in Venice, assembled by the archaeologist Sabatino Moscati, a leading authority on Barbriet - Ten Ca matters Punic.

عندناه The Phoenicians seem to have been regarded with suspicion as sharp and disbonest traders, kidnappers and pirates, and unpleas-ant people who practiced the ritual sacrifice of their children. In the view of Moscati and his colleagues, this reflected a hostility fed by fear and resentment of an alien people whose ability made them dangerous rivals. Their nautical competence gave them a singular advan-tage not only in trade but also, toward the end, in sea battles against the Roman fleet. The comimgan mercial and military power of Car-thage (Phoenician for "The New Town") made them the chief rivals of Rome and, when the Romans conquered Carthage in 146 B.C., they systematically destroyed it. Carthage contained great libraries that were given away to rival princes in Africa and ultimately perished. The only Phoenician writing surviving today is a treatise on agriculture that was translated , into Latin. Yet, "according to very learned persons," says Samt Augustine, many wise things were contained in the Partic books."

Moscati maintains that the Phoenicians have been libeled. In his view the stories of infant sacrifice are infounded. Moscati concludes that the bodies found in the temples were only those of infants and still-born children brought there to be incinerated in special Ceremonies. The Phoenicians are generally hailed as the inventors of what was to become our at bet (The Sicil-ian historian Deviceus Siculus, however, quotes Cretan sources as claiming that the invention came from them and that the Phoenicians merely changed the shapes of 14 Sec. 14 the letters). MoDo The Conventional Wisdom Targets Could Soon Be Out of Date 2 Firms By LEONARD SILK

New York Times Service

EW YORK --- The term "the conventional wisdom" has become so much a part of the language that people forget that the phrase was coined by John Kenneth Galbraith just 30 years ago in "The Affluent Society." Mr. Galbraith said that, in some measure, the articulation of the conventional wisdom is like a religious rite - "an act of affirmation like reading aloud from the Scriptures."

Business executives would feel better for hearing the virtues of free enterprise praised once again. Economic scholars would feel secure in hearing the efficiencies of the free market reaffirmed. At the higher levels of scholarship, Mr. Galbraith said, the conven-tional wisdom made originality highly acceptable "in the abstract" and, indeed, the vigorous advocacy of originality even became a substitute for originality itself.

Yet Mr. Galbraith held that conventional wisdom had an important function: It pro-tected society from too facile a flow of thought. He warned that a great stream of intellectual novelties, if all were taken seriously, would be disastrous for society.

However, the conventional wisdom, in both capitalist and Communist societies, is not fixed; it is periodically overcome, not by new ideas, but by the march of events, which may expose old ideas as uscless or dangerous.

In the Soviet Union, economic stagnation has exposed the follies and dangers of central planning and control. And General Secretary Mikhail S. Gorbachev is congealing the new conventional wisdom into the terms glasnost, or openness, and perestroika, or reconstruction; wherever one meets them, at home or abroad. Soviet spokesmen cite the terms as the new gospel.

What is the emergent conventional wisdom in the United States? First, there is a belief that "a new interna-tional monetary system is needed." Floating exchange rates, once integral to the conventional wisdom, have proved too disturbing to trade, investment, financial markets and national economic development. So the conventional wisdom now calls for a return to fixed, or at least much more stable, exchange rates. But the wisdom does not yet say what that new international monetary system should be. Conventional wisdom also says:

 "In an interdependent world, closer coordination of national macroeconomic policies is essential." So countries with trade deficits should tighten up their economies and countries with trade surpluses should stimulate theirs. But some countries, like West Germany, don't want to submit to the new rules. And in the United States, in this election year, the Federal Reserve's mon-tary policy may not be used to raise interest rates lest it push the economy into a recession.

• "The federal budget deficit should be brought in to halance." Alan Greenspan, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, summarizes the now-conventional view: "Reducing the deficit fur-ther would give us the opportunity to add to domestic saving and reduce dependence on foreign capital." But the conventional wisdom does not yet say how this is to be done. Indeed, it appears to be saving that it must be done without raising taxes, cutting military spending or cutting benefits for Social Security, Medicare or Medicaid.

Is the conventional wisdom necessarily wise? Mr. Galbraith - warned that it "accommodates itself not to the world that it is meant to interpret, but to the audience's view of the world." After the November election, a tougher view of reality — and what is to be done about it -may emerge. For the present, it is not that the underlying conventional wisdom is wrong, but that nobody does anything about it anymore.

The march of events may expose old ideas as useless or dangerous.

A merger of MoDo with Hol-mens, a maker of newsprint, and Iggesunds, a maker of fine papers, would create a third major force in Sweden's forestry industry. With 20 billion kronor in annual sales, the new group would be the indus-try's second-biggest, behind Stora Kopparbergs Bergslags AB. ed, the new company would rank ahead of Svenska Cellulosa AB, which currently is Sweden's No. 2 forestry products company with annual sales of 15.7 billion kronor. MoDo owns 17 percent of the shares and 33 percent of the voting rights in Holmens. It holds 49 per-cent of the shares and 40 percent of the voting rights in Iggesunds, which in turn owns 11 percent of the shares and 16 percent of the voting rights in Holmens.

In April, MoDo will acquire an additional 16 percent of the shares and 31 percent of the voting rights in Hohnens through a previous agreement with Marieberg AB, a newsprint and printing company.

Analysts voiced doubts about the amount of capital that would be left after the acquisition for com-peting in the capital-intensive pa-per industry. But they said it was unlikely that the bid would foil be unlikely that the bid would fail be-

In a move to widen its tiny market presence in the United States, Marks & Spencer has reached a conditional agreement to buy the prestigious Brooks Brothers men's clothing chain from Feder-ated Department Stores Inc. for $770 million.

Although the purchase binges on Campeau Corp. winning its $6 billion takeover battle for Federated, Marks & Spencer has left little doubt that it plans to be a player in the American market. "If we lose Brooks Brothers, we'll look elsewhere," said Rouald Jacobson, a spokesman for Marks & Spencer. "We have made a commitment to the American market."

Emphasizing reasonably priced, quality cloth-ing, together with specialty food items and a vari-ety of home furnishings, Marks & Spencer has hit on a formula for attracting consumers of all income brackets.

Its store near the Marble Arch on London's Oxford Street holds a place in the Guinness Book of Records as "the department store with the fastest-moving stock in the world."

In the financial year ended March 31, 1987, Marks & Spencer posted a pretax profit of £432.1 million, up 18 percent from £365.8 million the previous year. In the first half ended Sept. 30, See MARKS, Page 11

LONDON -- Kuwait said Friday that it had raised its stake in British Petroleum Co. above the important 20 percent level, but pledged to stop buying shares when its holding reached 22.5 percent. Trevor Ball, chief investment manager at the London-hased Kuwait Investment Office, said Kuwait would not seek a seat on BP's board and did not see its share buying as a means of influencing the world's No. 3 oil company.

BP confirmed Friday that the Kuwaitis held 1.27 hillion BP shares, a 21.28 percent holding. In mid-February, Kuwait said it bad 19.53 percent of the shares.

There was no immediate com-ment Friday from BP officials. The chairman, Sir Peter Walters, said Feb. 18 he did oot expect Kuwait to interfere with the way BP is run. But he added that any Kuwaiti stake above 20 percent might cause some discomfort for the oil giant. In early February, Treasury offi-cials said the Kuwait Investment

Office had given assurances that it would not seek to increase its BP stake further.

BP shares fell on the London Stock Exchange after the Kuwaiti announcement Friday, but analysis characterized the decline as a kneejerk reaction. Its stock closed at 274 pence a share in heavy trading. down from 277 pence Thursday. Some analysis speculated that Kuwait might have succeeded in boosting its stake to 22.5 percent by the close of trading. The Kuwait Investment Office, which places the Gulf state's petro-dollar investments worldwide, has been buying into BP since last fall. Recent beavy trading in the shares fed speculation that the Kuwaitis were increasing their stake.

Mr. Ball reiterated Friday that the Kuwaitis saw the BP holding aroused concern among British politicians and BP officials.

company or influence its management.

"At 20 percent we are not uncomfortable in terms of practice," Sir Peter said last month. But he added that BP had "tactical reservations about the holding" and that the company would have to dem-onstrate that it "is still as independent as it ever was."

Under British takeover rules, an investor must make a full bid for a company if it raises its stake past 29.9 percent.

"I think the game is over," said Michael Unsworth, chief oil analyst at the London brokerage Smith New Court PLC. "I think it is going to settle down into a good share-holder-management relationship.

"In the long term, nothing is cer-tain," he added. "But I do not be-lieve the Kuwaitis will be bad shareholders."

Industry analysts said there might be times when the Kuwaitis, as major oil producers, could help swing a transaction in BP's favor because of their holding.

But Chris Grudniewicz, another analyst at Smith New Court, re-marked that BP "will probably now try to get the British government to lean on the Kuwaitis to get some assurance they'll stop buying.

The kuwaitis began buying heavily into British Petroleum last fall, when the British government sold its 31.5 percent holding in the company and BP itself issued new stock.

The huge share issue came shortly after the stock market collapse. As a result, many BP shares were left in underwriters' hands and were available at bargain prices.

By Tyler Marshall Los Angeles Times Service LONDON — In his memoirs, Marcus Sieff, the former chairman of Marks & Spencer PLC, recounts how a store manager once confronted a normally cheerful employee of 20 years' service after noticing that she looked depressed.

After some prodding, the woman, a janitor, confessed that a son she had struggled to put through college was about to get married in South America and neither he nor she could afford to pay her way there to attend.

Following consultations with senior managers, the problem was resolved. She "was given a formight's leave, her fare and expenses were paid and off she went to South America for her son's wedding," Lord Sieff recalled.

The incident reflects the paternalism and atten-tion to detail that has helped transform Marks & Spencer from a small open market stall in a northern English industrial town a century ago into Britain's sixth-largest company with annual sales of £4.22 billion ($7.8 billion). Its 264 British stores draw 14 million customers a week.

Historically an inward-looking, patriotic com-pany — it has always preferred British suppliers where possible — Marks & Spencer expanded into and lggesunds Bruk AB in a trans-action valued at 6.1 billion kronor ($1.03 billion). Iggesunds said its earnings rose 23 percent, to 343 million kronor from 278 million kronor in 1986, as leave of the stock and futures markets was cited by the presidentially appointed Brady Commission as a major reason for the sevenity of the October collapse.

for control of stock-related instruments. The commodifies commission has regulated trading in stock index futures since it began in 1981.

Mr. Chapman and some others at the confer-ence said the individual reforms adopted by the exchanges since the market crisis, while well intended, have exacerbated the situation.

"I think a number of the steps taken so far have not been encouraging," said Robert Glau-ber, who was the Brady Commission's executive director.

Daily price limits on heavily traded stock index futures products, such as Standard & Poor's 500 index, were adopted by the Chicago Mercantile Exchange and the Chicago Board of Trade, though not by the Chicago Board Op-tions Exchange, immediately after the October crisis in an attempt to curb volatility. But the New York Stock Exchange did not adopt simi-lar limits for the underlying stocks, preferring instead to focus on limits on program trading as a means of controlling price swings.

Earlier this year, the New York exchange's board voted to prohibit use of the high-speed computer system for execution of the contro-versial program trading strategy known as in-dex arbitrage whenever the Dow Jones industrial average moves more than 50 points in a day.

In the scenario presented by Mr. Chapman, a market panic would initially trigger automatic price limits at major Chicago futures ex-changes. Then, with stock index futures prices effectively frozen, selling pressure would trans-restrictions would have kicked in even before this point, there would be little speculative or computer-assisted trading available to belp keep the markets aligned or to cushion the fall. During the market crisis last October, stock and futures prices decoupled during the most dis-turbing periods of volatility and panic. Because each of the financial exebanges "has put in circuit breakers on our own, we've guaranteed that we will disconnect the markets," Mr. Chapman said in an interview after the conference.

"If you lock in the price of the futures during a market break, and you don't stop stock prices from falling, you're creating a big financial exposure" in the stock market.

Two regulators at the conference, while declining to comment on the specific scenario suggested by the CBOE head, said they were concerned about the general issues he raised. Edward Fleishman, an SEC commissioner, said he thought that the adoption of price limits on futures was "very constructive."

"I am more troubled by the long run," he

Kalo Hineman, a commissioner at the Comnodity Futures Trading Commission, said, "I have trouble with having price limits in one market and not in another."

"We are disconnecting markets," said Karsten Mahlmann, chairman of the Chicago Board of Trade. "There has got to be a joint

BOCA RATON, Florida -A bill that would empower the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board to halt trading in stocks and futures during a financial crisis has been drafted by Senator Patrick J. Leahy, a Democrat of Vermont. The bill, circulated at the annual meeting of the Futures Industry Association on Thursday, also would establish an interagency council to coordinate surveillance over stock and futures markets. The council would comprise the secretary of the Treasury and the chairmen of the Fed, the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Commodity Futures Trading Commission.

As head of the council, the Fed chairman would have the power to change limits on volume or price and alter margin requirements. He would also be empowered to balt trading in an emergency, which the bill defines as a threat to the integrity of the financial system or of major financial institutions.

By Robert A. Bennett New York Times Service NEW YORK — Manufacturers Hanover Corp. in an apparent effort to refute persistent rumors that it would be forced to cut its dividend this year, has taken the unusual step of publishing an estimate of its yearly earnings. In its annual report, released Thursday, Manufacturers Hanover projected that net income in 1988 would amount to at least $800 million and that the total would be much higher if Brazil resumes payment on its debt. The projections, unusual for a blue-chip bank such as Manufacturers Hanover, were included in the report's letter to stockholders. Like the other U.S. money center banks.

Manufacturers posted a big loss in 1987 because of its additions to loan-loss reserves for Third World debt. Although the bank reported net income of $22.7 million for the final quarter, it posted a loss for the year of $1.14 billion.

selling assets, such as the company's consumer finance subsidiary. Another $200 million would come from tax benefits stemming from last year's additions to reserves for loan losses.

The banking company, the nation's sixth largest, also expects to have earnings from its core operations of $377 million, including $95 Partly for that res million from a restructuring announced earlier this year.

Those earnings do not include any income on dividend amounted to a whopping 17.5 percent, the bank's loans to Brazil. Since Blazil seems to The otock has since recovered substantially, be nearing agreement with its lenders, some closing Friday at $27, for a yield of 12.1 percent.

analysts consider it likely that the couptry would catch up on last year's payments and meet those due this year. Those payments could add another $150 million to Manufacturers' net income, Even if Brazil fails to meet its obligations this year. Manufacturers Hanover would be able to bolster its equity position by about $600 million, after paying approximately $200 million in dividends, according to its calculations. If Bra-zil were to come through, the total amount of earnings that would be retained would amount to some $750 pullion.

Manufacturers Hanover said that a $700 million increase in its common stockholders' equity would bring its ratio of equity to expected total assets to almost 4 percent, up from only 2.8 percent at the end of 1987.

The 4 percent level of equity to assets is critical because that is the ratio being proposed by the Federal Reserve System as the minimum The carnings prediction for the current year includes the result of $230 million in gains from adopted, as expected, banks would be expected to reach the target by the end of 1992. The market has feared that Manufacturers Hanover would not be able to reach the target and would be forced to cut its dividend to retain more income. The annual dividend on its com-

Beecham Shares Fall Back After Heart-Drug Report

LONDON - Beecham Group PLC's shares fell 17 pence to close at 475 pence Friday after publication of a report on its new heart drug Eminase that was favorable hut less so than some analysis had expected_

The Lancet, a British medical journal, reported that in a trial conducted on 1,000 heart-attack patients over 30 days, patients treated with Eminase had a mortality rate 47 percent less than that of those treated with a placebo. Eminase is a clot-dissolving agent.

Earlier in the week Beecham's shares had risen to 492 pence on the London Stock Exchange on speculation about the report. Peter Woods, pharmaceuticals analyst at Barclays de Zoete Wedd, said Friday. "Eminase will be a moderate success but not a blockhuster. It is a very good technical achievement, but it will hit severe mpetition and it will mainly be for hospital use."

Marion Sears, analyst at Phillips & Drew, said, "I think this is good news for Beecham, but more data has still to come out. It will not have any effect on earnings until the year to March 1990." She estimated that Eminase's market worldwide would be worth around $250 million a year once it had been established in all major markets, which is not likely for at least five years. Beecham Laboratories, a subsidiary, said the test data also indicated that the one-year mortality rate in the Eminase-treated group was 10 percent, compared with 19 percent in the placebo group. Eastern Cited for Contempt Over Plans to Sell Shuttle

The dollar received a boost early in the day from dampened inflation womes because of an unexpected decline, of 0.2 percent, in producer prices for February. It was also heiped by figures showing a weaker-than-expected rise of 0.6 percent in retail sales in February, which seemed to subdue worries that a strong U.S. economy would attract more imports.

The government also revised the January report on retail sales to show a decline of 0.2 percent, instead of an originally reported increase of 0.5 percent.

In New York, the dollar closed at 1.6585 DM, down from 1.6640 on Thursday, and at 127.30 Japanese yen, down from 127.95.

However, a narrower-than-expected deficit could give a strong boost to the dollar, traders said. The market is vulnerable to a good number," said James O'Neill of Marine Midland Bank.

The pound continued to benefit from high British interest rates. "There's a huge buying interest in sterling," said Linda McLaughlin of Chemical Bank. "On a yield basis, it is really attractive."

The strength of the mark contin-ued to put downward pressure on the dollar, as traders sold dollars to complete cross trades.

In London, the dollar was also a little weaker. The pound remained strong after a moderately busy day. Dealers said they expected little text Tuesday and the U.S. trade EULCS. The dollar closed in London at .6615 DM, down from 1.6645 at hursday's close, and at 127.35 en. down from 128.08 Thursday.

Adding to the dollar's weak tone has been the strength of the mark, which has benefited from rumors, largely discounted, of an impend-ing realignment of the European Monetary System, dealers said.

The pound managed to avoid the profit-taking that pegged it back on Thursday and ended the day three basis points higher, at 77.4, on its trade-weighted index.

The pound closed at 3.0775 DM, up from the opening 3.0652 and from 3.0683 at Thursday's close. Dealers still generally expect the current rally to carry the pound up to 3.10 DM, but most now say that point will oot be reached before Tuesday's budget.

PARIS - The French franc opened trading Friday at its lowest level ever against the Deutsche mark, but recovered somewhat by the close.

Dealers attributed the wave of franc sales that begao Thursday, most of it from outside France, to sudden nervousness over presidential elections in May.

The mark started at 3.413 francs, its highest ever. It slipped to 3.4003 france by the close. The mark had ended Thursday at 3.4054.

The French finance minister, Edouard Balladur, said Friday that Thursday's fall of the franc against the mark was "the consequence of a speculative movement" led by opera-tions on the British pound. Some dealers interpreted the limited support lent by the Bank of France Thursday to the frane as a tactic by Prime Minister Jacques Chirac's gov-enment to highlight market

Japanese Banks Expand Role in Domestic Bonds Compiled by Our Staff From Disputches TOKYO - Japanese banks, banned from higher issuing costs. underwriting publicly offered bonds, are bop-

The banks have recently increased their presence in the market for custing domestic bonds Bank for International Settlements, a Basel-issued by foreigners, making more frequent based institution owned by central banks, re-orders to securities firms that actually underwrite the offerings, local brokerage managers to increase their ratios of capital to assets,

Bankers are trying to establish good records in the so-called secondary market, they said, thus paving the way for approval to actually underwrite the bonds. But they also want to use holdings of the high-quality bonds available in the market to improve their capital adequacy ratios in line with tougher international standards.

Banks are now allowed only to be the comthe cherical business of paying investors. If efforts by banks to revitalize the secondary market eventually drive down the bonds' yields, bond sources said, that may ease strong criticism of the commissioned bank system and allow the banks to keep a wide margin of profit on their fees. Brokerages and yen bond issuers have been calling for the commissioned bank role to be curbed or abolished, saying the fees result in Japanese commercial banks currently are

ing to demonstrate their securities abilities to the authorities by expanding their presence in an important segment of the domestic bond and defuse foreign criticism that they enjoy unfair competitive advantages.

New standards outlined in December by the based institution owned by central banks, re-quire commercial banks in 12 industrial nations weighted for risk, to 8 percent by the end of 1992. The two main central banks behind the proposal were the Bank of England and the Federal Reserve Board, the U.S. central bank. "After the BIS proposals, banks renewed interest in bonds of international organizations such as the World Bank and Asian Development Bank," said an official at Dai-Ichi Kangyo Bank Ltd.

He said such bonds have a risk weight of missioned banks for such issues, responsible for protecting bond bolders' rights and conducting ments have a risk weight of up to 20 percent, requiring a higher level of capital.

"It's very tough to reach the designated 8 percent," said an official at Bank of Yokohama Ltd., ooting that the bank would have to issue bonds convertible into equity every year to meet the capital adequacy requirements. "Oth-er banks will issue as well and it's going to be floating rush," in the securities market, he said. At the moment, oo Japanese bank has a ratio of more than 4 percent. Daiwa Bank Ltd., based in Osaka, stands highest with primary capital accounting for 3.59 percent of assets.

Bankers say the new measure was introduced partly to put a lid on the expansion of Japanese banks, whose looser capital adequacy standards gave them in added edge in their successful push to dominate world lending.

Japanese banks recently surpassed their U.S. counterparts in international assets and continue to expand their share of the world market, the latest quarterly BIS report said.

They have $1.4 trillion in assets, 35 percent of the global market, compared with U.S. banks with $630 million or 15.8 percent. French banks rank third with 8.3 percent followed by West German institutions with 7.8 percent.

Japanese banks have previously been allowed to report higher capital ratios by includ-ing 70 percent of their hidden reserves, or unrealized gains on their equity, as part of primary capital. Under the new international rules, only 45 percent of the hidden reserves can be included, putting the average capital ade-quacy ratio for Japanese banks at an estimated 6 to 7 percent.

"There's oo penalty for the banks that fail to maintain 8 percent," an official at Saitama Bank Ltd. noted. "But if we don't, it will undermine our credibility," he added, and Jap-anese banks will be blocked from international markets. (Reuters, AFP)

U.K. Revises Deficit Down

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches

LONDON - The British government reduced its estimate of the 1987 current-account deficit on Friday, to £1.68 billion ($3.10 billion) from £2.49 billion.

The improvement in the new estimate, made by the Central Statistical Office, stemmed primarily from a recalculation of the balance of trade in services, especially insurance underwriting income and inflows from overseas bank accounts. The current account measures trade in both merchandise and services. The earlier estimate was made Feb. 29 by the Department of Trade and Industry, Both estimates are preliminary. The Central Statistical Office said the current account, seasonally adjusted, showed a surplus of £46 million in 1986. The Feb. 29 data had shown a 1986 deficit of £944 million. Again, a recalculation of trade in services accounted for the revision.

Merchandise trade last year was in deficit by £9.6 billion, com-pared with a deficit of £8.5 billion in 1986.

Services in 1987 registered a £7.95 billion surplus, against £8.5 billion, the statistics office said. The Department of Trade had estimated the services balance was in surplus for 1987 by £7.13 billion against £7.52 billion for 1986. (Reuters, AFP) (Reuters, AFP)

LOS ANGELES --- Sometime in every game he plays, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of the Los Angeles Lakers will take a pass near the basket, fake to his left, swing to his right and shoot the most po-tent and feared shot in the history of basketball. "It might be the most awesome weapon in the history of any sport," said Pat Riley, the Lakers' coach, who this week won his 400th victory in the NBA. "The fact that Karcem is the only one who shoots it makes it that much more amazing." The shot, called the sky hook, has terrotized Jabbar's National Basketball Association opponents for 19 years. In a game marked increasingly by speed, power and improvisation near the basket, this complicated, almost scientific move characterizes an era unto itself.

Because of it, Jabbar holds six most valuable player awards, five NBA championship rings and virtually all of the NBA's careerscoring records. Only three active NBA players have scored half as many as Jahbar's 37,000-plus points in their careers. At the age of 40, Jabbar says he

s not the player he once was. He is slower and quicker to tire, with uneven skills as a defender and rebounder. But no one on the Lakers seems greatly worried by this, and the reason is probably the hook. To stop it, opposing teams still dou-ble- and triple-team Jabbar, leaving other Lakers open for easy

"If I can take that shot with in from the corners of the court one-on-one coverage, I'm very confident that I can make it most of the time," Jabbar said before a recent game At the least, it is strange that a shot this great has no rivals or

"They want to show great and obvious athletic ability and jump high and shoot jumpers and throw the ball down." his right knee high into the air, pivoting on his left foot, then twirl and jump in one motion. With his left elbow in the face of his defender, he would extend his right arm over his head and,

For Jabbar, it was different. In 1956, he shot his first sky hook in a junior high school game, acting out of what he said was a mixture of fear and confusion at having the ball in the first place. He missed the shot, but the coach was pleased, so Jabbar kept try-

In those days, the plain hook shot was far more common than it is today. In the pros, George Mikan of the Minneapolis Lakers shot hooks with either hand near the basket, and in the early 1960s, players like Bob Houbrigs of the University of Washington sent Jabbar believes that the jump shot and the advent of the ban was designed specifically to reduce his dominance of the game. Instead, it probably in-Then, as now, the sky book creased it.

In his final years in college, Jabbar was deadly with his sky hook, often letting it go from sev-cral feet above the rim of the basket. The only way to block it was to jump up and over the body of an agile 7-font, 2-inch (2.18-meter) player, which was virtually impossible.

"People tried everything," said Pete Newell, who coached an NCAA championship team at the University of California. "He'd get pushed, punched, poked in the eye, all kinds of things. But people underrated his passing skills and his inside moves to the basket."

They did not underrate his hook. With the Milwaukee Bucks, Jabbar was teamed with Oscar Robertson, whose passing talents were legendary. Birdies and Eagles: Why Not a Gull?

By Gordon S. White Jr. New York Timer Service CORAL SPRINGS, Florida - A sea gull took off with a couple of golf balls Thursday during the first Detroit round of the Honda Classic, caus-ing Brad Faxon to wonder whether Mitwoukes ature just doesn't like him. Faxon's drive on the first hole of the Tournament Players Club at Eagle Trace went down the middle, as did the drives hit by his playing partners, Bruce Lietzke and Bruce Fleisher. But when they arrived at the landing area, there were only two balls in the fairway. The big gull had flown off with Faxon's ball nestled in its beak. As Sectile

the bird was heading out over a water hazard along the left of the fairway, it dropped the none-too-tasty morsel. The ball came to rest minwest on the bank just above the water. Returning to see whether any of those other white things might make an easier lunch, the bird at-tacked Fleisher's ball. Before getting airborne with it, but after moving the hall about 10 feet (3 meters), the gull was chased away by a marshal

The situation is covered by the Rules of Golf --- rule 18-1 to he exact, which states, "If a ball at rest is moved by an outside agency, the player shall incur no penalty and the ball shall be replaced before the player plays another stroke." 'Our only problem was to make sure that the sea gull was an outside agency," said Faxon, who had a callrvine 74 Long Beach SL # German shepherd pick up his ball and run off with it at Pebble Beach in 1985. "We called for an official, and Mike Shea showed up. When we told him, he laughed. That's the first time I've ever seen a PGA Tour official langh about a ruling." The guli qualified as an outside agency, so both Faxon and Fleisher were able to play from the approximate landing spots of their drives. Each got to the green with his next shot. Fleisher sank his 10-foot putt for what Faxon called "a double birdie" on the par-4 hole. Faxon two-putted for par.

The first-round leader was Ronnie Black, who carded a superb five-under 67 in wind and rain.

Pacer Cardigan Bay Dies in Auckland

AUCKLAND. New Zealand (NYT) — Cardigan Bay, a pacer from New Zealand who in 1968 became the first horse in harness racing history to win $1 million in purses, has died at the age of 31. The aged gelding died last Friday on Puketuru Island off Auckland, New Zealand. Cardigan Bay, who raced in the United States from 1964 through 1968, spent his last 19 years on the island's stud farm, which is owned by Sir Henry Kelliher. After winning 29 of 47 races and purses of $158,212 in New Zealand and Australia, the gelding, then 8 years old, was purchased for $100,000 early in 1964 by a syndicate in the United States. Thailand Wants Missing Piece Of Stone Jigsaw

By Michael Richardson International Herald Tribune

D HNOM RUNG, Thailand - lo the Late afternoon sun, the sandstone of this Khmer hilltop temple in northeastern Thailand - built between the 10th and 13th centuries to hocor the Hindu god Shiva - glows with subtle colors.

At the zenith of its power in Cambodia, the Khmer empire extended from its capital at Angkor Wat deep into what is oow Thailand. But as Thai kingdoms grew in strength, the Khmer empire receded. Phnom Rung and hundreds of other Cambodian historic sites in Thai-land fell prey to neglect and pillage.

"In 1971, when we began restoration work. Phnom Rung was a tumhledown ruin," said Samart Sapyen, the resident archaeologist, while showing a reporter around recently. "It took us 16 years and cost 35 million baht [$1.6 million] to reassemble this stone jigsaw puzzle."

It was finished late last year, and Crown Princess Maha Chakri Sirindhon, daughter of King Bhumibol Adulyadej, is due to open Phnom Rung officially as a historical park next month.

But one important thing is missing, Samart said, pointing to an empty space above the eastern entrance to the main sanctuary. A large part of that missing lintel is oo display in The Art Institute of Chicago and the Thai government has asked for its return, asserting that it was stolen from the temple and smuggled out of Thailand in the 1960s.

The board of the Chicago institute will meet Mooday to consider the demand.

Carved in relief, the piece in Chicago depicts the Hindu god Vishnu reclining oo the hack of a mythical serpent, An-anta. Professor M.C. Subradradis Diskul, a leading Thai art historian, described it as "priceless." Experts at the institute have characterized the piece as "repre-sentative of the exuberant richness and technical virtuosity of the finest work" of the elassical period of Khmer art.

lo Chicago, a spokeswoman said the institute was "extremely sensitive" to the Thai coocerns, and was exploring the possibility of returning the sculpture "in of Thailand's Fine Arts Department, said exchange for an example of the art of the early Khmer culture of Thailand." Thai officials say they are prepared to give the institute a replica of the reclining Vishou, hut oot another Khmer work of equal value.

The case of the missing lintel has be-come o cause célèbre in Thai media and political circles. It threatens to be an irritant io Thai-U.S. relations if it is not amicably and quickly resolved, said Pornthep Techapaibul, a member of par-liament for the province where Phom Rung is simated. He recently led a delegation to Chicago to lobby for the return of the sculpture.

The affair illustrates the problem of theft and smuggling of antiques from developing countries in Asia, and the failure of those countries to protect cultural property adequately.

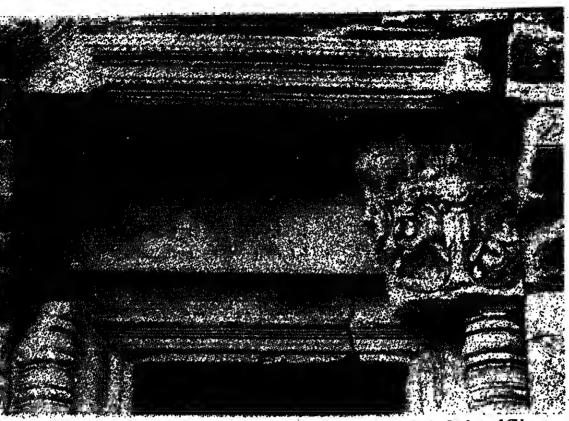

Knowledgeable Thai sources say that some of best pieces taken out of Thailand find their way to museums in the United States and Europe. But many more items end up in the hands of wealthy private collectors, almost impossible to trace.

There have been four thefts from the National Museum in Bangkok in the last 10 years, the latest in September, when 18 pieces of silk hrocade, woven early in this century for the royal family, were taken. They have not been recovered.

to the same mooth, Indonesia reported that thieves had stolen 20 Chinese ceramics, some dating from the Ming and Sung dynasties, from the National Museum in Jakarta. Indonesian police said that the bowls, jars and other stolen items would be worth millions of dollars if sold abroad. At about the same time, more than 40 gold and hronze statues thought to be about 1,300 years old were reportedly taken from archaeological sites in southern Sumatra.

Officials at the Ministry of Culture in Jakarta blamed the museum hurglary oo poor security and oegligence. However, other officials responsible for protecting cultural property in both countries say that shortage of government funds is part of the problem.

The space in the Temple of Shiva once occupied by the carved lintel now on view at the Art Institute of Chicago.

that his organization did not have the staff or money to carry out its respons-bilities, including the supervision of 32 museums and hundreds of archaeological sites. "We receive only a small fraction of 1 percent of the oational budget," he said, but the United Nations Education-al, Scientific and Cultural Organization says "that if a country wants to preserve its national heritage properly, the govern-ment should set aside at least 1.5 percent of the annual budget for that purpose." Phutorn Senanorong, curator of the King Narai Museum in Lopburi, a provincial capital north of Bangkok, said that "the business of lonting is very cruel and systematic oow. Some monks, he said, have been killed or beaten trying to protect temple trea-sures from robbers. Officials of the Fine Arts Department have also been assaulted and threatened. Taveesak said that under a 1961 law, any art object more than 80 years old is supposed to have a permit from his depariment before it leaves Thailand, "Uofortunately," he added, "many things go underground or behind the curtain." Thai authorities say the case of the lintel missing from Phnom Rung exposes weaknesses in the only instrument of international law designed to halt the traffic in masterpieces of antiquity. This is the 1970 Convention oo the Means of port, Export and Transfer of Ownership of Cultural Property, negotiated under UNESCO american UNESCO auspices

Some reports in the Thai press have alleged that U.S. servicemen at a radar station on the same hill as the Phnom Rung temple were involved in the theft and illegal export of the lintel in the early 1960s. Samart Sapyen, the archaeologist, said the lintel weighed about a ton. Rejecting allegations of complicity, the U.S. Embassy in Bangkok said last month that because Thailand was not a party to the UNESCO convention it could oot request U.S. government assistance

Professor Subhadradis said that Thailand and other developing countries had not signed the conventioo because under its terms if the owner of o smuggled object could prove he acquired it without knowing it was stolen, the country of origin would have to buy the piece back and pay the cost of transport.

The Art Institute of Chicago says that when the stone sculpture was added "in good faith" to its permanent collection in 1983, there was oo proof of illegality. The sculpture was first loaned and then given to the institute by James Alsdorf, a Chicago art collector and president of the Alsdorf Foundation. The foundatioo says it acquired the work from a New

Professor Subhadradis said he spotted the missing piece in the institute when he was in Chicago on a lecture tour in 1972. "Unlike many other fine pieces from Thailand that I have seen in U.S. public collections, the reclining Vishnu was photographed at Phnom Rung by the Fine Arts Department before it was stolen. So we have the evidence that it belongs to Thailand and should be returned," he added.

He said that the Fine Arts Department had written to the Alsdorf foundation but received oo reply. But the institute said that the foundation had asked the Thai government in 1976 and again in 1977 for evidence that the sculpture was illegally removed from Thailand but had not got a response.

In a letter in February to James Wood, director of the art institute, Marut Bunnang, Thailand's Education Minister, pointed ont that Phnom Rung was placed on the list of protected Thai moouments in 1935. He said that the Thai government saw "no legal or moral difference between the removal of the lintel and the theft of a major object from a museum colle

Marut added: "We are convinced that it would be observed attentively by more people each year as the centerpiece of Phnom Rung than as an isolated exhibit at any museum in the U.S."
